

I would say 90 to 95% of sound therapist believe in the afterlife, I have talk to some who find it hard to believe in. For those people I feel it's all about just the sound and making a buck it's not about the people who are seeking healing.

I do not come from a musical background I come from a healers background. When I work with sound for healing I am just a vessel that spirit is working through. I am almost in a trance state of being I don't remember what I do or how I do it but my healing helps everyone I work on.

In closing as you can tell in my paper I cannot communicate via pen and paper. English and grammar were never my strong points. I am a healer I relieve mental and physical pain and blockages from people using Spirit, my hands and instruments that are provided to me.

Remember our loved ones are only a vibrational thought away they're on the other side ready to communicate with us whenever we take a break in our hectic life to communicate with them they come to you in your dreams, they come to at night tucking you in with a gentle kiss on your forehead just as you're falling asleep that soft brush crossed your face it's mom, dad or kitty saying I love you and sweet dreams.
