

Inergetix CoRe System

In the burgeoning field of vibration therapy, there are many technologies utilizing sound, light, low frequency vibration, nutrition, intention, sacred geometry, flower essences, and biofeedback to help living creatures and biosystems achieve optimum health on spiritual, emotional, physical and mental levels. A promising new technology which combines the above modalities is the Inergetix CoRe System. To quote the website, www.energy-medicine.info⁺, “Inergetix is the most complete system for sound energy, magnetic, electric, plasma, and light energy treatment”, and seamlessly integrates information and energy.

Informational medicine includes sacred geometry, shapes, music, videos and patterns. Distance healing is also a form of informational medicine. Informational medicine's most well known example is homeopathy. The founder of homeopathy, Hahnemann, discovered that whether a prepared remedy or the remedy's name written on a piece of paper was diagnosed, similar results would be achieved. Energetic medicine can be defined as the science of preventing, diagnosing, alleviating, or curing disease by means of mechanical, sound, heat, electrical, light, and magnetic transference. The Inergetix CoRe System aims to integrate both types of medicine in an easy to use and less time consuming package.

The basis of the entire system is found in the software. A client's issues are taken and analyzed using Eastern and Western health modalities, including nutrition and food supplements, homeopathies, herbs, Chinese acupuncture and meridian systems, affirmations and emotional concepts, flower essences, gem essences, colors, chakras, doshas, pathogens and toxins to understand them bioinformationally and get to the core/root to address them from that understanding. The database includes 100,000 items grouped by modality and is arranged so it can be expanded upon for greater depth. Wow, imagine all the time and effort it would take to personally acquire and understand all the holistic health systems enough to boil them all down and tailor that understanding to issues a client is presenting. That is precisely what is going on with this system. I just hope all the boiling down has resulted in an accurate rendering of the information, or things could get ugly in a hurry.

The basic system includes an organ balancing program which renders over 2,000 body parts and organs in 3-D color graphics and a section that shows the user to see how much improvement to the organ has been reached by treatment on a bioinformational level. A biofeedback frequency program is also included that reaches 22,000Hz and is transferred using sound and bioinformation via light-weight wrist electrodes using a computer sound card where the level of the signal is limited in strength to a few millivolts. I imagine that these frequencies are based upon the research of Dr. Royal Rife and his contemporaries because they are the frequencies said to have shown to be most personally resonant. Informational resonant imprinting is also possible by placing the light-weight electrodes into a physical substance and connecting them to the audio port on the computer. This means when Aunt Bunny needs a treatment for her sore feet, her data can be input into the machine and a personal remedy can be created specifically for her, imprinted into a jar of water and sent through the mail.

The advanced system is a general update of the non-software components, and all of the items in the basic system are included except for the electrodes which are exchanged for ergonomically shaped, gold-plated electrodes. These look similar to a really high end gold video game joystick you might find with some of today's flight simulator games. These electrodes work as informational facilitators that increase body awareness and energy flow and are based in the principles of biogeometry, where the body's geometry has been utilized as a blueprint for design characteristics. This system makes available more advanced imprinting via a "health navigator" that combines an imprint tray, the electrode connections, audio devices, a foot plate, and various electrical, crystal, magnetic and light applicators...a plasma generator is not included but is possible. It kind of looks like a healthcare health kit box, with various holes as an interface for the above mentioned energetic applicators, and aesthetically pleasing colors and design. 8,000 pre programmed frequencies relating to 1100 conditions according to Rife/Clark research are possible and sufficient in most cases. A natural medicines comprehensive database book is also included with many natural remedies and information with an annual online subscription included.

I would love to try this system in person as I think it represents where the future of holistic healing and vibrational therapies are headed. I am concerned with the technology being seamlessly integrated into our daily lives however, without major upheaval on multiple levels. According to the website, the FDA doesn't have an umbrella heading for this type of technology despite some 50 years of innovation in bioresonance. With the rapid evolution of information technology and the internet, and the spread of information just a phone click away, it isn't going to take long for this system to be known in many areas of this country, if it works. However, a major paradigm shift needs to occur so that this type of technology and understanding of the global energy system can reach a general level of acceptance by people in the United States. The bridge between where we are currently and where we are going is where the rubber hits the road, and this system helps to synthesize a lot of different modalities into a unit ready for the changing healthcare industry.

+ www.energy-medicine.info used as general information about this technology